SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 12.

THE ARTIFICIAL RIPENING OF FRUIT .- Just at this time the banana trade is the feature of the fruit business, and dealers are handling large quantities of the West India product, of which several cargoes have lately been received. The fruit is not always rips when brought here, and to hasien what would otherwise be left to time to accomplish a firm on Pratt street have adoptof the West India plan of using a ripening house, which they have just constructed and which is the only one in the city. It has been found that fruit ripened in this way is really superior to that which arrives at maturity in the usual manner, and that it retains a freshness and flavor not found in time-ripened bananas.

The process used by the firm named is an interesting one, and merits a description: Two large rooms were partitioned off in their warehouse, in the construction of which the main object was that they should be perfectly dark and and 10th. Call or write, enclosing stamp for as near air-tight as possible. Stringers, with reply. feb 13-1y hooks to hang the bunches on, were placed across the room, and gas attachments made to heating pipes which give out no light. Thermometers were then placed in different parts of the room, and the green fruit having been hung inside, and the proper temperature obtained, the rooms are closed tightly, only to be opened to inspect the condition of the fruit.

In a short time the green banana begins to turn white at the stem, and in a few days the entire bunch assumes the same color, retaining its firmness, and is then ripe and ready for market. The operation is a very neat one, and requires care to prevent the fruit being subjected to too much or too little heat. The firm have about 2,000 bunches of fruit undergoing the process now, one bunch of which is over five feet long and holds about 230 bananas, the shortest is five and a half and the longest eleven and a quarter inches in length,—Balt. American.
